

ABSTRACT

The AI System for protein superfamily classification is related to an artificial intelligence system for protein family classification using the fuzzy inference theory in a neural network to improve robustness, convergence and correctness. In addition, the 5 system uses a content addressable memory to process the early phase of the classification to improve the execution speed.